

Texas A&M Economics Professor Andrew Barr Cited in the Wall Street Journal

Andrew Barr, Assistant Professor of Economics, was recently cited in an article in the Wall Street Journal “The Benefits of Early Childhood Education and Health Programs May Last Longer Than a Lifetime”

In addition, “CBS This Morning” highlighted the article on their Tuesday September 26th, 2017 broadcast.

Andrew Barr’s research focuses on understanding the role of financial and informational factors in the college decisions and related labor market outcomes of non-traditional students. His work has been supported by the National Science Foundation, the National Academy of Education, the Spencer Foundation, and the American Educational Research Association. Dr. Barr holds a PhD in Economics from the University of Virginia and he is a research affiliate with CESifo.

The full article can be found HERE