

The Department of Economics at Texas A&M University had the honor to host the 27th Annual Meeting of the Midwest Econometrics Group on October 20th and 21st, 2017.

The conference took place in the Memorial Student Center and attracted about 130 participants from the US and around the world. It featured two keynote presentations delivered by Domenico Giannone from the Federal Reserve Bank of New York and Barbara Rossi from the University of Pompeu Fabra in Spain. There were five parallel breakout sessions throughout the day and a half event. Additionally, the department hosted a mentoring workshop for junior female economists and a networking dinner for female economists prior to the conference. Both the conference as well as the mentoring workshop were well received by the participants. For more information and details please refer to the conference web-site.